For the Week of December 15 –21, 2018

NUISANCE LEVEL

DISEASE THREAT

Very few mosquitoes were collected over the past week, as nightly temperatures approached freezing on more than one occasion. Staff did notice a number of salt marsh mosquitoes across the Savannah River where ditching operations are taking place, and these observations were limited to areas where vegetation was being disturbed and forcing flight in otherwise resting mosquitoes. It is likely that mosquitoes will remain dormant for the rest of 2018. However, should warm weather return to our region and mosquitoes become active, remember to call Mosquito Control to report any mosquito problem in your area.
